Q -- is that correct?
A That is correct?
Q Is there a new law -- is there not a new law that now for the first time permits challengers to actually be inside the polling place within the chute?
A I believe that's true. Although, again I -- this is the summary of the Indiana legislative election stuff and we are still piling through all of that.
Q Well, that's where I found out about it.
A Yeah.
Q Do you know where the impetus came or from whom the impetus came for that particular challenge?
A I don't. I wasn't even familiar -- I wasn't aware it was in the legislature. So, no, I don't.
Q So your answer to my question that this new law won't slow down the process is predicated on the assumption that there will not be a concerted challenge program initiated or undertaken by one of the political parties.
A That would be an accurate statement, yes.
Q But there's no assurance that that will not happen, is there?
A There is no assurance, no.
Q: In fact, the opportunities for presenting these type of challenges have now increased by virtue of the relocation of the challenger and the new photo I.D. requirements?

A: I would say that's an accurate statement, yes.

Q: I had some questions of Mr. King this morning, and I'm not sure I fully understood his answer with regard to the voter identification numbers, the VINs --

A: Yes.

Q: -- which I think came along in about 2002; is that correct?

A: In anticipation of the statewide voter registration list, yes.

Q: And as I read the law, once the new statewide voter registration database, the list, is in place every voter is going to be assigned a VIN?

A: If there is not already one recorded, yes.

Q: What role, if any, will these VINs play in terms of establishing voters' identities on election day?

A: My understanding is that those numbers will be used in order to help identify duplicates. So that if a person, a John Smith, for instance, is on a poll list in both Allen County and Marion County, that Voter Identification Number in some way will be
