Michigan officials: Foreclosure can't stop votes

Midday update

ASSOCIATED PRESS • SEPTEMBER 29, 2008 • FROM LSJ.COM

Michigan election officials say they will remind local clerks that home foreclosure lists are not sufficient to challenge voting status.

The reminder will be part of upcoming informational packets sent out in anticipation of the November election.

State elections director Chris Thomas said Monday foreclosure lists alone aren't enough to contest a voter's residence.

A person whose home is in the foreclosure process still could be living at the address on the foreclosure list.

The notice could ease an ongoing flap about disputed allegations of possible challenges to Michigan voters in Macomb County, considered a possible key area in the presidential contest between Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain.
Michigan officials: Foreclosure can't stop votes

by The Associated Press

Monday September 29, 2008, 2:18 PM

Michigan election officials say they will remind local clerks that home foreclosure lists are not sufficient to challenge voting status.

The reminder will be part of upcoming informational packets sent out in anticipation of the November election.

State elections director Chris Thomas said Monday foreclosure lists alone aren't enough to contest a voter's residence.

A person whose home is in the foreclosure process still could be living at the address on the foreclosure list.

The notice could ease an ongoing flap about disputed allegations of possible challenges to Michigan voters in Macomb County, considered a possible key area in the presidential contest between Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain.
Michigan officials: Foreclosure can't stop votes

Posted by The Associated Press September 29, 2008 14:16PM

Categories: Ann Arbor News - News, Breaking News

Michigan election officials say they will remind local clerks that home foreclosure lists are not sufficient to challenge voting status.

The reminder will be part of upcoming informational packets sent out in anticipation of the November election.

State elections director Chris Thomas said Monday foreclosure lists alone aren't enough to contest a voter's residence.

A person whose home is in the foreclosure process still could be living at the address on the foreclosure list.

The notice could ease an ongoing flap about disputed allegations of possible challenges to Michigan voters in Macomb County, considered a possible key area in the presidential contest between Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain.

Comments (0)