EXHIBIT G
Mobile Register

Everyting Alabama

Case 2:06-cv-00392-WKW-SRW     Document 3-9     Filed 05/01/2006     Page 2 of 3
In August, the secretary of state asked for proposals again, this time calling for software license agreements. The revised proposals were under consideration.

In a letter, the governor of the state asked for proposals again, this time calling for software license agreements. The revised proposals were under consideration.

The procuring process for a new system began in 2003, but no software contract has been signed yet.

Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo. The head of the state's election office said that the project is in limbo.

"They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.

The head of the state's election office said that the project is in limbo. "They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.

The head of the state's election office said that the project is in limbo. "They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.

"They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.

"They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.

"They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.

"They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.

"They have not indicated," the head of the state's election office said, "that they will make any changes." Wory was budgeted to $12 million for a replacement system, but that plan is in limbo.