EXHIBIT 8 – PART C
EXHIBIT E

NAVAJO MOUNTAIN, ARIZONA POLLING PLACE
EXHIBIT F

Along the Road To Navajo Mountain Polling Place

Example of Wet Dirt Roads On The Navajo & Hopi Reservations
EXHIBIT G

Overlooking Tonalea North & South, Kaibeto Precincts
Behind the Ridge Is Navajo Mountain & Inscription House Precincts
On The Navajo Reservation

Overlooking Coalmine and Tonalea North & South Precincts On The Hopi & Navajo Reservations
Hogans are the traditional homes of the Dine. They serve both as residences and as places for certain ceremonies.

Often six sided, a hogan may also have more or fewer than six sides. They are usually built from materials readily available - wood, earth, stones, even concrete. The doorway faces the sunrise to allow the occupants to welcome the new day.

Many Navajo hogans do not have electricity or running water. You may see pick up trucks hauling firewood or water from community wells. You will not see towns or cities in the familiar sense. Navajos live in family groups spread throughout the reservation. Small clusters of hogans, trailers, and a house or two may signify more than one generation of a family.

How to Build A Navajo Hogan

At this site you can find out about the advantages of hogans and how the hogan was built.
EXHIBIT I

Supai Village – Havasupai Precinct

Trail to Supai Village