Redevelopment Changes Landscape

High Street means as many different things to Moritz College of Law alumni as there are graduates. Most often it was the destination for a pleasant diversion from the study of law, whether it was dancing at the South Heidelberg in the 40s, grabbing a soda at the Nicklaus Pharmacy at Chittenden and High in the 50s, or enjoying lunch at the State Restaurant, an unofficial law school annex, in the 60s.

In many ways, the neighborhood around the law school was much like any other. Into the 70s there was a hardware store, a movie theater, and a bank. But by the 80s, those had given way to establishments like Street Scene and Papa Joe's, which provided an active nightlife. But in the last decade, students seemingly abandoned the area for the suburbs as buildings deteriorated.

Today, the High Street area south of the law school is more like a barren moonscape. The 7.4 acres just south and east of Drinko Hall have been cleared for the construction of the University Gateway Center, proposed to be a dynamic blend of retail, entertainment, office space, housing, and parking. When complete, the area is expected to be the largest mixed-use, urban redevelopment project ever attempted in central Ohio.

Because of its proximity to Drinko Hall, it also has the potential for expanding the Moritz College of Law facilities by providing office space for student groups, an area for alumni activities, and housing for law students. However, plans for how the Moritz College will be involved have not been finalized.

"We should know in the next few months whether the Gateway Project will include apartments for law students," says Dean Nancy H. Rogers. "If law students can live across the street from the Drinko Hall law building, we will have a more vital intellectual community, and attending law school will be more affordable for our students."

Plans for the Gateway Center are the result of a community-based effort to invigorate and enhance the quality of life in the University District, an area of Columbus that includes several neighborhoods adjacent to or near the Ohio State campus. Led by Campus Partners, an Ohio State-backed revitalization organization, the project will be anchored by a 50,000-square-foot, full-service Barnes & Noble College Bookstore at High Street and 11th Avenue. Other local, regional, and national retailers will be included in the area, along with a variety of restaurant and entertainment venues and 150 to 200 apartments. Ohio State has agreed to lease 70,000 square feet of office space in addition to the potential space for the law school.

"We expect the Gateway Center will improve the economic vitality of High Street, provide the community with much-needed goods and services, promote neighborhood revitalization, and create new employment opportunities for area residents," said Terry Foegler, president of Campus Partners.

To assemble the Gateway site, Campus Partners, over a three-year period, negotiated the purchase of 31 parcels of land in the area of 11th Avenue and High Street and worked with business owners to assist or relocate 25 businesses. Property acquisition was completed in mid-2002. The remaining buildings on the site were demolished by mid-summer.

Dean's note

Last year, our faculty engaged in a year-long initiative to plan the future of the Moritz College of Law. It culminated with a retreat last spring; we outlined the goals for the school in the coming years and identified initiatives to implement them. The objectives embraced seven areas – enhancing faculty, facilitating continued improvement of teaching, building our leadership in particular fields and study, attracting the best students and helping them find good jobs, maintaining diversity, and building community.

This issue of Special Edition focuses on the last of the seven goals. Building a strong community means that students are engaged outside, as well as inside, the classroom. We are doing that by adding stimulating events, such as the March visit by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. Our third-year students will have an hour-long conversation with faculty with commentary by Justice O'Connor in the auditorium. Employing new technology, we will connect the other students with Justice O'Connor electronically from other areas of Drinko Hall. We are also increasing the numbers of judges, special speakers, and practitioners who visit the college to present new perspectives on law and the legal profession (see the Upcoming Events on page 6).

We are particularly excited about physical developments around Drinko Hall that will enhance this sense of community. The new café (see page 3) will be a space where students, faculty, and staff can interact informally on a daily basis. That's important because by next fall, our faculty-student ratio will have been reduced to 14 to 1, a very attractive ratio among law schools nationally.

The area around Drinko Hall is also changing and will contribute to that important sense of community. By 2005, it is anticipated that the Gateway Project will be finished, complete with apartments for law students (see page 1). In addition to the apartments, there will be many places for the law school family to gather – places that are safe and convenient to our own building.

You are also a part of the community we hope to encourage here at the Moritz College. Once the café is complete, please plan to stop by for coffee, lunch, or a snack and, in the process, say hello to the students there. Whether you are a student, professor, or graduate, you are part of the Moritz Law family.

Columbus City Council last fall approved funding from the city's capital improvements bond sale for the design and construction of public improvements on the Gateway site. Bidding on these public improvements, such as utility and roadway work, was expected to take place in late January or early February with construction likely to begin in March and to be completed by mid-summer.

In January, Campus Partners announced that Chicago-based Jones Lang LaSalle, the world's largest real estate service company, would manage development of the project. The firm replaced Boston-based Druker Co., whose design for the Gateway Center is being carried forward. Druker stepped out of the project last summer after reaching an agreement with Campus Partners that hiring a development manager would be the best approach for building the Gateway Center.

While the project development schedule has not been finalized, actual construction of the project's buildings should begin later in 2003. The Gateway Center is projected to open in August 2005.

This Month @ Moritz Debuts to Great Applause

We've heard many favorable comments from alumni who have visited our new and improved website at www.moritzlaw.osu.edu, but we were overwhelmed at the response to our new e-newsletter This Month @ Moritz. Launched in October, the online magazine for alumni brings the latest and greatest stories right to your email inbox. Alumni profiles, invitations to special events, faculty news, and "virtual party" photo scrapbooks provide a chance to reconnect to each other and to the Moritz

College each month. Thanks to all new subscribers, and to all who offered their compliments. To subscribe to This Month @ Moritz, visit our website at <http://moritzlaw.osu.edu/communications/newsletter/index.html>

Café Cultivators

Passionate. That best describes Peter and Laurie Danis. It's the reason they began a successful Columbus restaurant after abandoning promising careers in law. It's why they've expanded their business to include two locations in central Ohio and it's why they've given freely of their restaurant experience to help improve the Moritz College of Law community.

Last summer, Dean Nancy H. Rogers asked the couple for their advice in developing a café in Drinko Hall. The area would provide a location for faculty, staff, and students to grab a cup of coffee or a sandwich without leaving the building. But more than providing sustenance, it would foster a sense of community, a town square of sorts, where members of the college family could connect in an era when most students leave after their last class for their homes on the fringes of the city.

The café will be located in the current student lounge and will be operated by an outside vendor. Part of the project will include renovation and remodeling the area to accommodate food service. (See story at right.)

"We believe that everybody has something they can give back to organizations," says Peter, a 1982 graduate. "This became a tremendous opportunity to give something back by sharing our knowledge and expertise with people who do something very different on a daily basis," he adds. The duo, who now operate Figlio Wood Fired Pizza Restaurants in Grandview and Upper Arlington, first scoured Drinko Hall for the best location for the café. As members of the faculty-lead Café Society, the planning committee for the café, they have made suggestions on programming, reviewed architects drawings, and interviewed vendors.

"It is exciting to think that we might be able to help create something better for future generations of students," says Peter.

"I hope our part in this café will bring students back together," adds Laurie, who graduated in 1983. "That sense of community is important."

They've approached the project as enthusiastically as they tackled the development of their business. The birth of their daughter, Kevlin,

Peter '82 and Laurie '83 Danis

14 years ago was the impetus for beginning the business. "It was just an unbelievable experience," recalls Peter, who delivered the baby under the watchful eye of their doctor. "It was that night we decided we wanted to do something on a daily basis that could capture the excitement and passion that we felt that evening," he adds. They wanted to work together in an area they felt more passionate about than law—and that was food. So they spent the next two years researching the industry and developing their plans.

Since 1991, their restaurant on Grandview Avenue has been a popular eating spot. The Columbus Dispatch has consistently named it as one of the top 10 restaurants in the city. In addition, the Zagat Survey named Figlio Wood Fired Pizza as the top gourmet pizza restaurant in Columbus. A second location on Riverside Drive is also a popular spot.

And while they don't foresee the day they might return to law, they haven't turned their backs on the profession. "You're only as good as your last meal you serve in a restaurant," says Peter. "If the day comes that we practice law again, so be it."

—Liz Cutler Gates

This summer, the student lounge at Drinko Hall will be remodeled to include a café where students, faculty, and staff may purchase coffee, soft drinks, and snacks. Above is an artist's rendering of the proposed changes.

Café Slated for Drinko Hall

It's been temporarily dubbed "The Legal Beagle Café," but when the as-yet-unnamed Moritz College of Law café opens next fall in the renovated student lounge, it is hoped that the area will contribute to building a greater feeling of community among the college's faculty, staff, and students.

Professor Louis Jacobs chairs the planning committee, affectionately called the Café Society, which includes graduates Peter '82 and Laurie '83 Danis; Professor Doug Berman and his wife, Chris Berman; Moritz Law Special Assistant to the Dean Tim Meager, and Student Bar Association President Monica Ramirez. Columbus architect Dimitri Smirniotopoulos has developed plans that create a warm, inviting space in the student lounge. Oxley's on the Go is the vendor that will provide coffee, soft drinks, and a limited menu of sandwiches and sweets.

Money from the Dean's Fund for Excellence, provided by the late Michael E. Moritz '61, is being used for the remodeling effort.

Once the coffee shop is open, alumni and friends are encouraged to stop by for a snack or lunch and an opportunity to visit with the Moritz Law family.

Alumni Return 2002: Friends Reconnect...

Torrential rain and rush-hour traffic couldn't dampen the enthusiasm of Moritz College alumni as they gathered on Friday, October 25 for the 2002 Alumni Return at the Westin Great Southern Hotel in Columbus. They began the evening catching up with long-lost friends at a reception in the Grand Ballroom with Dean Nancy H. Rogers, before settling in for the Alumni Awards Ceremony (see page 5). The classes of 1952, 1962, 1967, 1972, 1977, 1982, 1987, 1992, and 1997 then scattered, each heading to separate rooms for their class dinners and to savor some quality time together. Luscious desserts and strains of swing music drew many to the ballroom for the all-class dance, featuring the music of the Rick Brunetto Big Band.

By Saturday afternoon, graduates were ready to head to the 'Shoe to show support for the undefeated Buckeyes, who beat Penn State 13-7 in one of the most exciting games of the year. Fueled by chili, salads, and brats, they had plenty of energy to cheer on the Bucks.

It's Never Too Soon to Begin Making Memories

As the 2002 Alumni Return fades into memory for the classes that gathered there, the 2003 Alumni Return planning is underway! If your class year ends in 3 or 8, this fall is your time to reconnect with friends. Class committees are instrumental in making the reunion a success—as we all know, great attendance makes for a great party! If you'd like to serve on or chair the committee for your class, please contact us at landy.9@osu.edu or 614-292-2937.

...and Honor Their Own

The 2002 Moritz Law alumni award winners personify one of the college's most important missions—educating leaders. Around the corner and around the globe, they are making a difference in the world. All were recognized at a reception and awards ceremony on October 25 at the Westin's Great Southern Hotel in Columbus, Ohio.

Outstanding Alumnus

Outstanding Alumnus Thomas J. Fiscus '75 is helping shape America's place in the world. As Judge Advocate General of the U.S. Air Force, he provides legal advice, opinions, and counsel to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Air Force Chief of Staff, and Air Force commanders and agencies worldwide. He oversees a legal operation of more than 1,300 Air Force judge advocates, 300 civilian attorneys, and 1,600 support personnel.

Throughout his 30-year career, he has played a pivotal role in successful resolution of a host of important legal matters.

Since September 11, 2001, he has provided counsel on the unique legal issues raised by the war on terrorism and continues to play a key role in crafting the rules under which military commissions will be conducted.

Outstanding Alumnus Thomas J. Fiscus '75 and presenter Associate Dean Gregory Travaglio

Distinguished Jurist William T. Bodoh '64 and presenter Dean Nancy H. Rogers

William K. Thomas Distinguished Jurist Award

The Honorable William T. Bodoh '64, Chief Bankruptcy Judge for the Northern District of Ohio, is the recipient of the William K. Thomas Distinguished Jurist Award, which is presented to the graduate whose personal integrity and commitment to fairness, freedom, and equality exemplify the highest ideals of the judicial system. It is named in honor of the late William K. Thomas '35, who served with distinction on the U.S. District Court, Northern District of Ohio.

Judge Bodoh's ability to successfully manage the most complex cases, his sensitivity to all creditor constituencies and individuals involved, combined with his reputation for integrity, have made him a magnet for some of the highest-profile bankruptcy filings in the country. He has also become nationally known for his expertise in steel industry cases.

Judge Bodoh serves the profession and his community with equal distinction. He is widely published in professional and law journals nationwide and has served as a board member of the American Bankruptcy Institute and the National Conference of Bankruptcy Judges. A member of the Moritz College of Law's National Council since 1972, he has provided advice and counsel to six deans and served as president of the college's Alumni Society in 1994.

Outstanding Recent Alumnus Bill R. Hedrick '96 and presenter Kim Shumate '92, the 2001 Outstanding Recent Alumna recipient

Outstanding Recent Alumnus

In the six short years since his graduation from the Moritz College of Law, Bill R. Hedrick '96 has exemplified the professionalism and loyalty to the college that the Outstanding Recent Alumnus Award was created to honor.

Currently intake director for the Columbus City Prosecutor's Office, he and his staff determine the number of cases that enter the municipal court's criminal docket by deciding whether evidence exists to authorize the filing of a criminal charge. His promotion to this post was based on a record of success as an environmental prosecutor.

Bill's loyalty to the college is long-standing. He served as Student Bar Association president during his final year of law school. In the intervening years, he has returned to judge moot court and appellate advocacy rounds, and he has provided invaluable assistance to the Housing Clinic on numerous occasions. In addition, he spearheaded the class of 1996 five-year reunion.

Community Service Award recipients Fred '74 and Kathleen "Kathy" Ransier '74 and presenter Kent Wellington '91, who received the award in 2001

Community Service Award

A law school classmate characterizes Frederick "Fred" '74 and Kathleen "Kathy" Ransier '74 as an ideal team in saying, "They have worked cohesively, struggled to overcome hardships together, dedicated themselves to a life of service, and given fully of their love and caring for people to make life better for all."

Given the demands of family and successful legal practices, their combined community service accomplishments are staggering.

Both serve on numerous community boards. In word and deed, both demonstrate an enduring commitment to give back to their community and set the highest standard for volunteer community service in Columbus and throughout Ohio.

Public Service Award

Ohio Supreme Court Justice Evelyn Lundberg Stratton '78 is the recipient of the Public Service Award for her sustained, multifaceted leadership in improving child welfare and adoption nationwide.

Justice Stratton has been an active and effective member of the Dave Thomas Foundation for Adoption at Capital University Law School. She has played a significant role in the publication of books and videos used by juvenile and family court judges throughout the country, has written extensively on the topic of adoption reform, and has mentored law students eager to specialize in child advocacy.

Public Service Award recipient Evelyn Lundberg Stratton '78 and presenter John W. Garland '74, who received the Outstanding Alumnus Award in 2001

As chair of the Expedited Adoption Committee of the National Center for State Courts, Justice Stratton led a national effort to reduce the time for appeals in the adoption process.

Mentors Make A Difference in Uncertain Job Market

With uncertainty dominating the legal employment market, the number of fall 2002 on-campus interviewers was down slightly from previous years; moreover, the state budget crunch has had a great impact on the availability of state government positions for both students and new lawyers. Today's job seekers need networking, connections, and Moritz alumni more than ever before. Now, the Office of Professional Development has an easy way for students to make contact with helpful alumni—the new online Alumni Network! As part of an upgrade to paperless recruiting, the office is proud to launch this online searchable database that students can use to identify alumni by state, region, career, and other fields. If you are one of those helpful alumni who would like to be contacted occasionally by students, please take a moment to register in this online database. More than 69 Moritz Law alumni have registered to date, but more are needed.

To become a part of this exciting new project, log on to www.monstertrak.com, click on the "Career Contact and Alumni Network" link in the lower left column, and click on "Register." Make sure to choose "Ohio State University – Moritz College of Law" as the school. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact Ameer McKim '94, Assistant Dean for Professional Development, at (614) 292-0087 or mckim.2@osu.edu.

Retirement Security is Symposium Topic

As the nation's population continues to age, one of the biggest challenges the country faces is providing retirement security for the elderly. At their annual symposium, the Ohio State Law Journal and the Moritz College of Law will explore legal, economic, and social policies for meeting that challenge.

The symposium, "Public Policy for Retirement Security in the 21st Century," will be held on April 11 at the Moritz College of Law, 55 West 12th Avenue at The Ohio State University.

The interdisciplinary conference will feature four panels, each focusing on a different aspect of the issue. Scholars will discuss what other countries are doing to meet similar challenges and will explore options for Social Security and private retirement plans in the United States. They will look at funding of Social Security, including privatization and other reforms; the impact of Social Security upon minorities, women and low-income persons; and the reform of qualified retirement plans.

For more information, see the journal's website at <http://moritzlaw.osu.edu/lawjournal/symposium.html> or contact Eric Rusnak, Symposium Editor, at (614) 292-5589 or rusnak.22@osu.edu.

Long-Time Registrar Lee Mangia Dies

Long-time Moritz College of Law registrar Lee Mangia, 64, died suddenly on November 6, 2002. A dedicated employee of the college for 23 years, she helped a generation of students enroll for classes.

"She routinely placed the needs of others before her own," recalled Dean Nancy H. Rogers. "Lee was always ready to be a friend and cared deeply about all of the people in her life, including family, friends, colleagues, and students."

Lee Mangia

She is survived by daughters, Tina (Steve) Keefe and Linda (Don) Brown; son, Daniel (Tammy) Mangia; grandchildren, Jonathan, Jennifer, and Jillian Brown, Jacob and Lucas Mangia; sister, Patricia (Dave) Craft; brother, David (Martha) Francisco; and many nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held on Saturday, November 9. On November 13, the college family paused to remember her with a memorial service in Saxbe Auditorium.

Designated Professorships Enhance Scholarship

Extraordinary gifts from alumni donors have created professorships that enhance the community of scholars at the Moritz College of Law.

Five faculty members have been named to these designated professorships, a fixed term professorship that provides financial support for a mid-level faculty member. Those honored include Daniel C.K. Chow, Robert J. Nordstrom Designated Professor of Law; Sharon Davies, John C. Elam/Vorys Sater Designated Professor of Law; Alan C. Michaels, Edwin M. Cooperman Designated Professor of Law; Mary Ellen O'Connell, William B. Saxbe Designated Professor of Law; and Allan J. Samansky, Robert J. Watkins/Procter & Gamble Designated Professor of Law.

The Robert Nordstrom/Porter, Wright, Morris, and Arthur Designated Professorship of Law was made possible by the generosity of the Moritz College of Law alumni at Porter, Wright, Morris, and Arthur, where Nordstrom is a partner. He was a member of the Ohio State law faculty for 25 years and is the author or coauthor of leading texts in the fields of secured transactions, sales, and commercial paper.

The John C. Elam/Vorys Sater Designated Professorship of Law was established by the Moritz Law alumni at Vorys, Sater, Seymour, and Pease LLP. Elam, who died December 26, 2002, from complications from treatment of a brain tumor, served as president of the American College of Trial Lawyers and president of the Columbus Bar Association. For 27 years, he was the presiding partner of Vorys, Sater, Seymour, and Pease LLP.

The Edwin M. Cooperman Designated Professorship of Law was established in 2000 through the generosity of Edwin M. "Ed" Cooperman '67. He is the chair of Edmarc Investments LLC, a privately held company engaged in consulting and venture capital. Previously, he had a distinguished career at American Express where he started as an attorney in 1972 and eventually became chair and co-chief executive of Travel Related Services, North America.

The William B. Saxbe Designated Professorship of Law was established in 2002 through the generosity of the Honorable William B. Saxbe, a 1948 graduate of the Moritz College whose public service career is legendary. At the international level, he served as United States Ambassador to India. He served the nation as Attorney General and as a Senator from Ohio. His service to the Buckeye State includes Attorney General and speaker of the House of Representatives.

The Robert J. Watkins/Procter & Gamble Designated Professorship of Law was established in 2002 by the Moritz Law graduates at Procter & Gamble. Watkins '53 retired in 1989 after serving as associate general counsel for Procter & Gamble in Cincinnati. He is currently president of the college's Henry Folsom Page Society and has served as president of the Law Alumni Society and chair of the college's National Alumni Advisory Council.
