

Cheyenne N. Chambers, Associate, Tin, Fulton, Walker & Owen (Charlotte)

Cheyenne N. Chambers is a partner at Tin, Fulton, Walker & Owen, PLLC in Charlotte, North Carolina. She joined the firm in 2016, after her judicial clerkship with the Honorable Paul J. Watford of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Her practice focuses on appellate and trial litigation in the areas of civil rights, criminal law (appellate only), constitutional law, employment law, and immigration law (appellate only). Since entering private practice, Cheyenne has successfully argued Tully v. City of Wilmington, before the Supreme Court of North Carolina, a landmark case which created a new cause of action for government employees under Article I, Section 1 of the North Carolina Constitution. Cheyenne also has been selected by her peers to be included in Super Lawyers as a Rising Star in civil rights (2018 to present), and The National Black Lawyers' Top 40 Under 40, for the State of North Carolina (2020 to present).
