TEACHING EXPERIENCE

The Ohio State University Moritz College of Law

June 2017-present

Associate Clinical Professor of Law

- Teach and supervise Criminal Prosecution Clinic (fall semester) and Criminal Defense Clinic (spring semester). Select and assign cases to third-year students certified as legal interns. Supervise student prosecution or defense of misdemeanor cases from arraignment through disposition. Appear as counsel of record in all cases. Conduct student case conferences, instruct in case preparation, and oversee all courtroom appearances. Teach seminar component of course which includes simulations, lectures, field trips, and facilitated discussions of the broader issues of the criminal justice system. Develop course curriculum and content.
- Teach additional courses including first-year skills course Effective Communication for Lawyers and upper-level seminar course on Restorative Justice.

Drexel University Thomas R. Kline School of Law

August 2016 to May 2017

Adjunct Faculty, Criminal Litigation Field Clinic

- Taught the Criminal Litigation Field Clinic, a year-long course taught while employed as an Assistant Public Defender at the Defender Association of Philadelphia. Instructed and supervised a class of eight students certified as legal interns to appear in court under supervision. Developed syllabus and lesson plans for classroom lectures and discussions. Selected and assigned misdemeanor cases for student representation. Met individually with students each week to prepare for preliminary hearings and misdemeanor trials in Philadelphia's Municipal Court. Conferenced with and counseled students on all aspects of case and trial preparation including investigations, motions, witness examination, presentation of evidence, oral argument and sentencing mitigation. Supervised all courtroom appearances by students and provided feedback.

HONORS AND AWARDS

Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching 2020

An annual award that recognizes a maximum of ten faculty members from the Ohio State University for their teaching excellence. The award includes induction into the Academy of Teaching. Nominations are submitted by students, faculty and alumni. A selection committee reviews all nominations and bases award decisions on a review of a detailed letter from the department chair, the nominee's CV, and student evaluation forms from the previous three years. Several thousand professors are eligible for nomination each year.

Summer Jackson-Healy Public Service Award 2009

The Award is presented by the Equal Justice Foundation to a graduate of Penn Law who has "demonstrated an outstanding commitment to public service." Awarded for work both before and during law school, for what was considered a "broad experience in public service that [was] almost unmatched among her peers."

Pennsylvania Bar Association Public Interest Award 2009

Best Oral Advocate, Harvard Animal Law Moot Court Competition 2008

The National Animal Law Competition, hosted by the Animal Law & Policy Program at Harvard Law School, is a collaboration between the Center for Animal Law Studies and the Animal Legal Defense Fund. Award given for the Appellate Moot Court competition.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Defender Association of Philadelphia, Philadelphia, PA June 2010-May 2017
Assistant Defender

- Regularly carried a caseload of forty to eighty major felony cases, approximately half of which were in the Family Violence and Sexual Assault Unit. Conducted all stages of case preparation: client interviews, investigations, witness preparation, motions research and litigation, negotiations and plea-bargaining, identifying and mitigating collateral consequences including immigration and sex offender registration, trial litigation, sentencing, and post-sentence motions.
- Represented clients in hundreds of bench trials in Municipal and Common Pleas Court. Litigated several jury trials, including charges of kidnapping, rape, aggravated assault, burglary, robbery, and weapons offenses.
- Completed a two-year rotation through nearly all stages of criminal defense: preliminary hearings, misdemeanor trials, felony bench trials, felony jury trials, juvenile court, motions court, and early resolution courtroom.
- Served as a Rotating Assistant Supervisor. Conducted trainings, observed attorneys in court and provided feedback, reviewed case files, and addressed client concerns.

Pennsylvania Juvenile Indigent Defense Action Network
Consultant

Beyond Binary Thinking: Addressing the Biases That Threaten the Progressive Prosecution Movement, The Ohio State Journal of Criminal Law (forthcoming).

In this article I consider the ways in which the adversarial nature of the criminal system produces cognitive biases that affect prosecutor decision making. These biases undermine the goals of the progressive prosecution movement by encouraging cynicism and binary thinking even among the most idealistic prosecutors. I argue that using restorative practices and restorative justice approaches can address some of these concerns and remove one impediment to the movement's promise.

Are There Stories Prosecutors Shouldn't Tell?: The Duty to Avoid Racialized Trial Narratives, 98 Denv. L. Rev. 457 (2020-2021).

In this article I explore the power of narrative in criminal trials, particularly narratives invoking stock stories that present racialized stereotypes to the jury. Such narratives risk unwarranted convictions, decrease the legitimacy of the criminal system in the eyes of the public, and serve to condone and reinforce harmful stereotypes to the detriment of society. I argue that prosecutors—particularly those holding themselves out as “progressive prosecutors”—have a duty to exercise prosecutorial discretion to avoid putting denigrating racialized narratives into the public sphere. I explore various duties of the prosecutor that require the avoidance of such narratives, even where doing so may mean foregoing trial altogether. Ultimately the article critiques the color-blind approach to justice employed by many prosecutor offices and argues for prosecutors to both embrace a color-conscious approach to prosecution and encourage line prosecutors to exercise their prosecutorial discretion to further the aim of racial justice.

“How Can I Reconcile with You When Your Foot Is on My Neck?”: The Role of Justice in the Pursuit of Truth and Reconciliation, 2018 Mich. St. L. Rev. 1349 (2018).

I wrote this Article for a Symposium entitled, “Is it Time for a Truth and Reconciliation Commission Post-Ferguson?” The Article argues that alternative justice practices such as truth and reconciliation commissions risk impeding justice if not paired with formal justice practices that hold offenders accountable, particularly in cases of state-perpetuated violence such as police shootings of citizens of color. I explore the difficulties facing prosecutors who do pursue charges against police, and argue that many of these difficulties stem from the commonplace actions of prosecutors in their everyday roles as partners with the police.

Observer/Facilitator, Measuring Minimum Competence: New Lawyers in the Workplace.
Institute for the Advancement of the American Legal System and the University of Denver.

The Building a Better Bar Research Project is developing and convening focus groups to explore the knowledge and skills that new lawyers use in the workplace. The purpose of the research is to inform the definition of minimum competence required for licensing in the practice of law. The core team is meeting with NCBE and sharing preliminary research results to discuss ways in which the research might inform the work of the NCBE. The project was noted in the ABA Journal Online in a recent article discussing possible changes to the bar exam.
